Supporting your safety, your rights, your culture

You have the right to choose your NDIS supports, and how that support is given.

NDIS supports should feel safe and be good quality. If something does not feel right, it is always OK to speak up.

We are the NDIS Commission. We help make sure workers and providers do the right thing and treat you with respect.

There are rules NDIS workers and providers must follow. If you have worries about your NDIS supports you can ask for help and talk to someone you trust. They can talk strong for you.

You can talk to a Remote Community Connector. You can also contact the NDIS Commission.

Your voice matters.
It's okay to speak up.
